

An SCII design can check the received data in each clock cycle, process them, and generate the output data after its latency. However, Multi-cycle designs cannot process all the received data. They need extra care not to lose any input data.